We're going to a cousin's wedding. My sisters think I'm silly wearing a hat, but I like it!

I've just finished up at college, studying beauty therapy. I've been working part time at 'Aromatherapy' a treatment shop in town that my friend runs; she's letting me work there full-time now I'm qualified. I enjoy it, but some of the customers are way too demanding.

I met an Australian guy, Mike, in the bar, when I was out with my mates. He started chatting me up, he was a bit forward but I liked him. He asked me out, I may as well go and see how we get on. He seemed impressed that I could play golf, most guys are but not so much when I beat them!

Mike's invited me to his sister's wedding. He says he's allowed to take a partner, I have misgivings though, I'm not sure I want to meet his family, they sound weird, and also, one of my brothers is going, as he's friends with the groom, I don't want him watching me all night, he's a way too overprotective big brother... I did go! Mike didn't tell his family about me, we acted like we'd just met, there were so many people there no one noticed. I told my brother not to say anything, I could tell by his look he was going to be watching me though!
