

ÉROS Tar-Minyatur

Éros
Tar-Minyatur the son of Eärendil and Ewing. He was one of the Half-elven of Middle-earth who chose to become one of the Edain, a mortal man, and was later crowned the first High King of Númenor. As a reward for the sufferings of the Edain against the dark forces of Morgoth, the Valar raised an island for them to dwell in, protected from the dangers of Middle-earth. Éros and the surviving Edain set sail over Sea, and guided by the Star of Eärendil came to the great Isle of Elenna, westernmost of all Mortal lands. There they founded the realm of Númenor, or Westernesse. The Valar also granted Éros and his heirs substantially longer life-spans. Éros had four children, Vardamir Nólimon, Tindómiel, Mantuendil and Atanalcár.
