

Celebrimbor

Celebrimbor was the son of Curupin and the only known grandchild of Fëanor. Celebrimbor plays an important role as the maker of the Rings of Power. During the Second Age, when he lived in the Elvish realm of Eregion, under the guidance and instruction of the Dark Lord Sauron – who feigned good intentions, calling himself Annatar. Celebrimbor and the Elves of Eregion defied Sauron by withholding the other rings from him. Sauron retaliated by attacking Eregion. Celebrimbor died from his torment.

